at Springfield, Mass., May, 1686. He was the youngest son of William Morgan, who removed from Llandaff in Wales to Bristol, Eng., and became a merchant there (date uncertain, but prior to 1635). A vessel having been chartered to carry colonists from Bristol to America, Miles, being about nineteen, in a spirit of adventure determined to "try his luck" in the new world, and embarked. On shipboard he became interested in a young girl named Prudence Gilbert. On reaching New England early in 1636, Miss Gilbert went with friends to Beverley, Mass., while Miles joined a party headed by Col. Pyncheon, which started from Roxbury, Mass., and went into the wilderness, founding what is now the city of Springfield, Mass. He became prominent in the colony and was chosen captain of its militia. He found means to send a proposal of marriage to Miss Prudence Gilbert, and, on its being accepted, went on foot for her with an Indian guide. He brought her back on foot the whole distance with such relief as could be obtained from one horse, loaded with Miss Gilbert's household goods, the Indian going ahead, Capt. Morgan with loaded blunderbuss pointed at the Indian next, and then Miss Gilbert leading the horse. Capt. Morgan built a blockhouse and stockade, in which, at the sack of Springfield by the Indians, the white inhabitants took refuge and a messenger was dispatched to Boston for aid. Captain Samuel Appleton, at the head of twenty-four men, marched to the aid of Captain Morgan and raised the siege. It is interesting to note that Miss Joanna Appleton who, in 1843, married Peyton R. Morgan, the fourth great-grandson of Capt. Miles, was a lineal descendant of this Capt. Appleton. See Hyde's Hist. of Brimfield.

Legislature (m. in 1770 Mary Woodbury); son of George of Westerly, R. I., freeman there from the earliest settlement of the town. The family originated in Hungary, the name, which was Deak in its earlier form, was a nickname in the ancient Magyar language for a man who was a writer or author, and the arms of the family indicate its origin, viz.: Azure, an open scroll in fess argent upon which, a dexter arm ppr., couped at the shoulder, is writing with a pen, or. Crest, out of a count's coronet, a naked dexter arm ppr., holding in its hand an iron-spiked war club. The family, though connected in one of its branches with a prince of Transylvania, was always democratic in its tendencies and played a conspicuous part in the assembly of the people that obtained a constitution for Hungary in 1239. The frequent occupancy of the country by the Turks and the consequent destruction of many public records makes it difficult to trace the family clearly in all its branches, but constant mention is made of the name in connection with the public affairs, and many points of the family history are well established by circumstantial evidence that cannot be proved by documentary. The branch of the family that came to America had its home in the county of Zala and numbered among its members the illustrious Francis Deake. The family are nearly extinct in both Hungary and America.

Dec. 7, 1709), his will mentions his cousin, i. e., nephew, and apprentice Benjamin Greenwood, who returned to Norwich, Eng., and his brother Samuel Greenwood, shipwright of Boston, ancestor of the late Miles Greenwood of Cincinnati, Ohio, and of the Greenwoods of Halifax, N. S., and New Brunswick; his only daughter Anna Greenwood m. 1st, James Green, and 2d, Nathaniel Henschman, merchant, and was mother of the Rev. Nathaniel Henschman of Lynn; his two sons were Samuel, previously mentioned, and Isaac, grad. Harvard Coll. 1685, m. Anna, dau. of Lt.-Col. Joseph Lynde of Charlestown, Mass., was a merchant trader, taken prisoner by the French in 1695, died abroad in 1701, s. p., and his widow m. John Phillips, d. Nov. 4, 1756, aged eighty-two, son of Col. John Phillips, provincial treasurer; second son of Miles, worsted weaver of Norwich, Eng., bp. at St. Peter's of Mancroft Sept. 1, 1600, buried in the church of St. Michael-at-Pleas Sept. 3, 1658, admitted a citizen May 3, 1627 (m. Abigail ———, to whom administration was granted at London on Dec. 23, 1658), his arms, with the family descent, dated Norwich, Sept. 25, 1723, are to be found in the Miscellaneous Pedigrees, vol. i, of Sir Isaac Heard, Garter, now in the College of Arms, London, which states that he used them on an ancient seal, viz.: argent, a fess sable, between three sparrowles (or six pointed stars pierced of the field), in chief, and three ducks in base, all sable. Edmonson's Heraldry ascribes to these arms the date 1594; subsequently (early in the past century) they were placed upon the family tomb in Copp's Hill, Boston. The above account says that Greenwood "had the character of an honest, understanding, discreet, diligent man, and of a very comely body;" eldest son of Miles of the parish of St. Peter's of Mancroft, Norwich, Eng., in which church he was m. Oct. 21, 1599, to Anne Scath of Barnham-Broome, co. Norfolk, he was located in Sudbury, co. Suffolk, for a few years, but had again returned to Norwich in 1616. The period of his decease has not been ascertained, nor has effort been made to trace his ancestry. He is mentioned in the will of Edward Greenwood, Jr., of Norwich, proved Apr., 1608, who was the son of the Rev. Edward Greenwood, rector of Great Dunham, co. Norfolk, who died 1591, and cousin of the Rev. John Greenwood, rector of Brampton, co. Norfolk, whose will, dated July, 1659, proved at Norwich Oct., 1663, mentions the gold ring worn by the testator, with his arms cut upon the stone therein, and the document is sealed with the same, viz.: sable, a chevron ermine between three saltires argent; crest, a demi-lion rampant or, holding in his paws a saltier argent. These are the armorial bearings of the Greenwoods of Greenwood Lee, near Heptonstall, co. York, and the circumstance would indicate a close connection between the Norwich and Yorkshire families. The latter trace a direct descent from Guiomar, or Wyomarus de Grenewode, achator in the household of Maud the empress, mother of King Henry II, A. D. 1154. The Rev. John Greenwood of Brampton was son of the Rev. Christopher Greenwood, rector of Shottesham, co. Norfolk, who died Feb., 1607-8, and whose brother, the Rev. Thomas Greenwood of Hingham, co. Norfolk, who died 1638, was the father of that iconoclastic alderman of Norwich during the civil war, John Greenwood (d. 1649) mentioned in Bishop Hall's Hard Measures. Bridget, widow of the last-mentioned, living in the parish of St. Michael-at-Pleas, mentions in her will, proved in 1675, "her husband's kinsman, Miles Greenwood of Norwich, worsted weaver," referring to the elder brother of Nathaniel, the New England progenitor.

B., Feb., 1783, was a farmer, and perhaps an Englishman (m. Aug. 14, 1764, Mary, dau. of Daniel and Elizabeth [Wheeler] Palmer, natives of Essex co., Mass.). Derivation of name uncertain. Perhaps from the Dutch, Gerritsen, Garretson, perhaps from the French, as the name is common in the south of France, Garrison, Garrisson, where the meaning "little oak" is assigned to it. The only known English family of the name considered itself of Dutch origin, and this is true of many American Garrisons.

The two original settlers in the colony of Virginia, John and Robert Peyton, were both of the ancient Isleham Peyton stock, which sprung from Reginald de Peyton, a nephew of William de Malet, one of the great barons who accompanied William I to the conquest of England, and was his mace bearer at the battle of Hastings. From him sprung Sir Robert Peyton de Ufford, who was summoned to Parliament as a Baron Jan., A. D., 1308, and was so distinguished in the wars of Gascony in the reigns of Edward II and III, that he was granted the town and castle of Orford in county Suffolk, and also for the personal danger he incurred in arresting Mortimer and some of his adherents in the castle of Nottingham, a further grant of large landed possessions. In eleventh of Edward III he was created Earl of Suffolk and was sent on an embassy to treat for peace with David Bruce, King of Scotland. The same year he was with the Earl of Derby at the battle of Cagent. In twelfth Edward III he served in Flanders and Brittany. Five years later he was sent as ambassador to Rome, touching a peace between England and Philip de Valois. Many years later he was in France with the Black Prince and at the battle of Poitiers and obtained the highest military renown by his skill as a leader and his personal courage. He was elected a Knight of the Garter. The prominent members of the family in America not noticed previously have been Henry Peyton of Westmoreland co., who took up 400 acres of land in Westmoreland co., Va., Nov. 1, 1657; Valentine Peyton, a colonel in the British army, who entered 1,600 acres July 20, 1662; Robert Peyton, a major in the British army, who entered 10,000 acres in New Kent Apr. 23, 1681; Thomas Peyton of Gloucester co., Va., who entered 150 acres June 16, 1758, he was a member of the House of Delegates of Virginia 1781; Yelverton Peyton, lieut. Oct. 4, 1705, Lydia Barnard; from tradition confirmed by recorded facts it is concluded that he was son of Robert, who d. at New London, Conn., in 1668, an old man, whose father died on the passage from England to America, leaving widow and three sons, about 1630-5, one of the latter was drowned soon after arriving, unm., the other, named John, m. and d. at Hartford, Conn., 1670, prob. without issue, the other was Robert above. It is supposed the family came from Norwich, Eng. No other family of the name seem ever to have come to this country, but there were Loflands here as early as 1674. The antiquity of the Loveland coat of arms points strongly to the fact that the emigration to England occurred during the Saxon conquest.

The name Morison is derived from the Gaelic mhor—famous, strong, mighty—and son, and means Mor-es-son, More's-son, that is, son of More, the mighty or powerful one. It is sometimes spelled Moreson. The spelling, Morrison, has been introduced within the present century, apparently under the mistaken idea that the name is derived from Morris—a Welsh name with which it has no possible connection; while the identity of their crests—three moors' heads—furnishes a strong presumption if not positive proof that the families of Moor, More, Moir, Muir (variously spelled) and Morison, were closely connected.

Page 27. — John Hord's name was not John Howard, but he was descended from the ancient family of Hord in Shropshire, Eng.

Page 171. — For Jonathan Owens read Asa Owens.

Page 223. — Add to Wood lineage: son of David, b. Feb. 18, 1677, d. Aug. 30, 1744, physician with extensive practice, justice of the peace, farmer (m. about 1701 Mary); son of Daniel of Boxford, Mass., about 1675, freeman there 1690 (m. about 1674 Sarah, dau. of Robert Andrews); probably son of Thomas of Rowley.
